NEWS RELEASE

DIGITAL PUBLISHING SOLUTIONS, INC. (DPS) ATTAINS ISO 9001:2008 CERTIFICATION

June 2009 – Digital Publishing Solutions is pleased to announce that it has met the requirements of the ISO 9001:2008 standards and received ISO certification from NQA-USA, accredited by ANAB.

DPS is a document service provider of automated, cost-effective publishing solutions. DPS services their clientele with outstanding customer service, a cutting edge composition environment and automation products from their software development group. The ISO 9001 implementation process for DPS was initiated company-wide as part of its efforts to continuously improve client satisfaction.

ISO (International Organization for Standardization) is the world's largest developer and publisher of International Standards. Achieving ISO 9001:2008 certification specifies that DPS's Quality Management System (QMS) focuses on their ability to meet and improve upon customer satisfaction and quality requirements. By identifying areas for improvement, creating recommendations to resolve identified gaps, and executing against these recommendations, DPS ensures that it has the processes necessary to consistently improve service, product and quality on a regular, quantifiable basis. DPS will be audited annually to ensure on-going compliance to ISO standards.

Maureen Tuttavilla, DPS Quality Assurance Manager, said "Our Quality Management System was designed to create conformity of product, yet encourage innovation. ISO 9001 certification aligns DPS's QMS with international benchmarks and world-class performance standards, and this accomplishment is an indication of DPS's commitment to provide excellent service and quality to its clients."
